What is HCl?

Hydrochloric acid (HCl) is the acid produced in the stomach. When this acid washes into the esophagus, a person experiences heartburn. Hydrochloric acid plays a crucial role in digesting animal proteins, yet hydrochloric acid levels can become deficient with factors such as age, stress, smoking and poor diet.* HCl is responsible for unwinding protein and activating pepsin, a powerful protein-digesting enzyme made in the stomach. When levels of hydrochloric acid are deficient, a person may be unable to thoroughly digest protein - particularly when proteins and carbohydrates are eaten in same meal - and may experience heartburn.* The HCl in Heartburn Prevention provides a missing component for proper digestion and stomach function in those individuals who produce too little stomach acid.*

The Importance of Enzymes

In addition to HCl, Heartburn Prevention contains the enzymes protease, amylase and lipase to aid in the digestion of protein, carbohydrates and fats, which can be difficult to digest for many people.* Heartburn Prevention may be taken by anyone who experiences occasional heartburn or eats a high-protein diet.

Graph is not exact but is used to illustrate the benefits of the multiple protease strains in the SmartZYME Blend.
